

Granta* Names 22 ‘Best of Young Spanish-Language Novelists’

Craig Morgan Teicher -- October 1st, 2010

You may not have heard of them yet, but chances are, after issue 113 of Granta comes out in mid-November, you will have: the 22 writers to be featured in the magazine’s first ever ‘Best Novelists’ issue to look outside the US and UK for hot new talent.

So here are the names of the 22 writers to be featured in Granta’s ‘Best of Young Spanish-Language Novelists’ issue, unveiled today at a press conference in Madrid:

Andrés Barba

Oliverio Coelho
Federico Falco
Pablo Gutiérrez
Rodrigo Hasbún
Sònia Hernández
Carlos Labbé
Javier Montes
Elvira Navarro
Matías Néspolo
Andrés Neuman
Alberto Olmos
Pola Oloixarac
Antonio Ortuño
Patricio Pron
Lucia Puenzo
Andrés Ressia Colino
Santiago Roncagliolo
Samanta Schweblin
Andrés Felipe Solano
Carlos Yushimito
Alejandro Zambra

All were born between the mid 1970s and the early 1980s, so they sure are young, in writer years anyway. And they're Spanish-speaking, hailing from all sorts of places, including Mexico, Argentina, Spain, Colombia, and Peru, though you can expect the stories to be helpfully translated into English for the English-language edition of Granta (though not the Granta Spain edition, of course, which will feature different pieces by the same group of writers).

So get excited! November's just around the corner, and Granta will be holding events in Frankfurt, Barcelona, Miami and Guadalajara to promote the issue. And here's more info from Granta
